FROM THE RABBI ... Sandford R. Kopnick

Teaching Judaism in the Temple

Soon after ordination, I had the honor of working with a rabbi who really embodied Jewish teaching. He had a strong vision of our congregation, which included a deep commitment to Shabbat. He taught on many different subjects, and hoped that we would, too. When working with any of the adult education or school-aged classes, whether formal or informal, he would always ask, “what’s Torah about what you’re doing?” Even if I accompanied the youth group on a bowling outing, he hoped that Judaism would be a part of the experience.

Recently, I heard about a rabbi who received a call from a parent who was surprised to hear their child’s views on an issue in the field of medical ethics. When asking their child about the topic, the child indicated that their view had developed from what they heard their rabbi say. The parent was surprised, not just because there was a difference with what the child understood and the parent’s own belief, but because the rabbi had not provided a range of views (including that from the non-Jewish world).

When it comes to many issues regarding medical decisions, especially issues like when to pull the plug, physician assisted suicide, embryonic stem cell research, abortion, and more, Judaism is very clear about when life begins, whether we can hasten death, and the value of saving a life. And while most people are generally surprised at the relatively conservative views of our tradition regarding many of these issues, I am always interested in the way students react—especially when Judaism teaches something different than a popularly held belief.

Every once in a while, I find that I have to remind our families that the Temple’s job is to teach Judaism. Our goal is to be warm and welcoming to as many as we can, and that Judaism—especially Reform Judaism—leaves a lot of room for interpretation. As American Jews, we can elect to allow Judaism to influence our beliefs as much (or as little!) as we choose. My prayer is that what happens in our classes, programs, and in our sanctuary is an honest reflection of a sincere interpretation about what the tradition teaches.

That rabbi who was confronted by that parent calmly reminded the parent that a synagogue’s role is to represent Judaism. When I have had this conversation, my goal is to also add that we should not disparage other faith traditions. Rather I hope to help our students (of all ages) to view Judaism through the modern Reform Jewish prism. Certainly there will be moments when someone’s view is contrary to my understanding of Judaism. This is fine, too. As with most things, respecting a difference is very important—but it is important that we all understand that it is OK to show Judaism to each other, even when it is contrary to what we value.

And, by the way, when we celebrate Purim this month—this entire philosophy gets a 24-hour reprieve.

I hope to see you soon!

WHAT'S HAPPENING IN Religious School?

Imagine if your children's school experience were condensed to less than two weeks time. How well could they get to know their classmates and teachers? What kind of interaction would they have with the content? This year we have 26 Sunday sessions of Religious School. At 2 hours and 15 minutes per session, that adds up to around 60 hours. TOTAL. That's equivalent to about 8 secular school days. I find that to be mind-boggling. How can we hope to build a community, instill Jewish pride, learn about holidays, history and customs, and facilitate Jewish identity-building in this short time?

Part of the answer is certainly RETREATS! Early in 2017, two groups of our students had the opportunity to learn and grow together in unique programming that takes them out of the Sunday-morning model to explore Judaism and gives them a chance to spend (a lot of) time together... a time that we, as educators have found to be unmatched.

The Valley Temple Mitzvah Corps (VTMC) traveled to Chicago with Rabbi Kopnick, their teachers David Reinhart and Rachel Stewart, their madrichah Alex Woosley and our community Israeli emissaries Alon Peretz and Hadas Silver. The full participation from the students (100% attendance) meant that this community of learners had a chance to build something we cannot accomplish on Sunday mornings alone. The van ride, Shabbat services and meals, educational programming in museums, the hotel swimming pool, and evening outings provide the varied settings for learning and laughter.

Our 4th, 5th and 6th grades had a successful Shabbaton (a day of programming and learning on Shabbat) with fantastic participation (2/3 of the group) during which we attended Shabbat services and studied Parshat Bo (that week's Torah portion). The educational programming included a game show that helped us learn terms from the Passover haggadah, a text discussion about the last words we say in a seder, "Next Year in Jerusalem," an art project, and a fantastic matzah-making activity led by the incomparable Clare Deutsch. We ate lunch together and also spent some time at Splash Cincinnati (an indoor water park). I believe this Shabbaton helped enhance the learning community and friendships among the students. They were able to learn and interact with the Torah portion in a different way than we can on Sunday mornings and they also spent time together outside of the Temple

Taking the leap to an overnight retreat will only enhance the group's cohesiveness and curricular goals.

Rabbi Kopnick and I highly value retreats as a part of the Religious School curriculum because they give us an additional 48 hours together as a learning community. We all have the opportunity to get to know each other in a different way as we share the van ride, laughing and listening to music, share meals, participate in smaller worship services designed with each retreat's specific theme in mind, play games, make art, explore new places, study text, have discussions, and solidify our relationships.

Our tradition is full of reverence for and commandments to study, especially as a community. It is my hope that the next time we are loading a van for one of our overnight retreat adventures, and it is your child's turn to participate, that you will let us know if you have any questions or concerns and then encourage your child to join the fun!

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Jon Hoffheimer

A disagreement between globalists and nationalists has become a worldwide phenomenon. The internet and mass online communication bring many diverse peoples together, sometimes to inflame others. Facts and pseudo-facts abound. How much of this large-scale communication is just talking past each other? Is this our new Tower of Babel?

It has been said that while everyone was present at Sinai, the Ten Commandments may have been heard and experienced differently by different persons. We favor diversity but not at the expense of principle. We favor principles but not at the expense of diversity. We value diversity of opinion, of practice. We see diversity within all of Judaism, within Reform Judaism and within Valley Temple.

Where does our reverence for Torah fit in? Each of us must struggle with the questions. When we struggle together, we can progress. Come to The Valley Temple and join the struggle face-to-face in a supportive environment.

WOMEN OF REFORM JUDAISM
stronger together

Hello Everyone!

It's hard to believe Spring is just a few short weeks away! Even though much of this winter has felt rather spring-like, there's something about that official first day that makes it seem more real. The warming days, increasing sunlight, and blooming flowers encourage us to come out of hibernation once again. There is plenty going on with the Sisterhood to bring us out and about too!

We recently had our annual Used Book Sale – thanks to all who donated, helped, and shopped! On the same day we braided beautiful and delicious challah, thanks to the guidance of Erika Hecht!

Coming up, we have a call out to bakers – please bring a dessert for Denim & Diamonds, which is on March 18. You can bring a dessert ahead of time, marked for D&D, or bring it that evening already plated.

We are rescheduling our Ladies' Night Out jewelry-making event at the Silver Diva (originally Feb. 25.) Keep an eye out for a fun evening in April! They don't post their schedules very far in advance, but keep checking your email and the Sisterhood facebook page for more information.

Please also keep in mind that an easy way to help with fundraising is simply to link your Kroger or Remke card with the Valley Temple Sisterhood. We had one Sunday sign-up opportunity already, and will have another one in late March or early April. Simply by swiping your card when you do your regular shopping, you help support Sisterhood, and in turn, temple and religious school programs. Please remember to renew or sign up!

We'll be putting together a slate for next year's officers very soon. Please join us, especially if there is an event or cause you would like to see Sisterhood get more involved in! Hope to see you there!

Hope to see you there!

Chrissy

Christine Knarr, Recording Secretary

- March 5 – Meeting and book discussion. We'll be talking about The Nightingale, by Kristin Hannah
- April 9 – Meeting

YOUTH GROUP

Hi! My name is Alex Woosley and I'm the Co-President of our temple's youth group! The weekend of January 20-22, I was given the wonderful opportunity of attending NFTY OV's Winter Kallah event at our very own HUC in Cincinnati. The weekend was the perfect balance between learning about Judaism and spending time with friends that you may have made over the years during your time at NFTY. We spent time with a "hot" topic of the participant's choice and talked about that topic while relating it back to Judaism. For this, I was able to lead a group about Gender and Sexuality. My group banded together to create a "legislation" of sorts that listed ways that we as Jewish people can include and stand up for LGBTQ rights. Saturday night we were surprised with a Murder Mystery Dinner! Professionals came and acted out a scenario in which we all tried to figure out who the murderer was. They also took audience participation with some of the character roles. I was picked for one of these roles and walked around the tables of NFTYites pretending to be my character and attempt to help them along the way towards who the murderer was. These were just two examples of the entire weekend, but all in all Winter Kallah was an amazing success and wound up being one of my favorite NFTY events that I have been to.

Spring Kallah is April 20-23, here in Cincinnati! Registration is open until March 15. Host families needed -- contact Brian Meeron.

DONATIONS NEEDED FOR PURIM CARNIVAL

New toys and gift certificates are needed for raffle and/or game prizes are needed for this year's Purim Carnival on Sunday, March 12. Contact Brian Meeron, Youth Group Advisor. Cakes for the cake walk would also be appreciated. Proceeds benefit Youth Group programs.

Men, Women, Wine and Blood: An Exploration of Gender in Rabbinic Texts

Thursday, March 9

Tuesday, March 14

Tuesday, March 28

At 7:30 p.m.

The formation of Jewish theology, law and practice as they emerge in rabbinic literature are profoundly influenced by ancient notions of gender and power. Wine and blood seem to be frequent as well. This three-session series will focus on a close reading of several rabbinic texts and the ancient negotiation of gender and power. No previous experience necessary.

SIX MEMOS FROM THE LAST MILLENNIUM by Joseph Skibell

Tuesday, May 2 at 7:30 p.m. (Letters 3 and 4)

Tuesday, May 9 at 7:30 p.m. (Letters 5 and 6)

A thief-turned-saint, killed by an insult. A rabbi burning down his world in order to save it. A man who lost his sanity while trying to fathom the origin of the universe. A beautiful woman battling her brother's and her husband's egos to preserve their family. Stories such as these enliven the pages of the Talmud, the great repository of ancient wisdom that is one of the sacred texts of the Jewish people. Comprised of the Mishnah, the oral law of the Torah, and the Gemara, a multigenerational metacommentary on the Mishnah dating from between 3950 and 4235 (190 and 475 CE), the Talmud presents a formidable challenge to understand without scholarly training and study. But what if one approaches it as a collection of tales with surprising relevance for contemporary readers?

Join us each session, as we take on two of the six memos—we'll get to know the Talmud better while also delving into good stories.

Dr. Samuel S. Rockwern Passover Delivery of Jewish Family Service...

Collection dates are now through March 19

Valley Temple is collecting boxes of Matzah that Jewish Family Service volunteers will deliver to Jewish families in the Cincinnati area. The Matzah is just one of several Passover food items personally delivered Sunday, April 2, 2017 during the 19th Annual Dr. Samuel S. Rockwern Passover Delivery of Jewish Family Service. Feel free to drop off boxes of Matzah in the Jewish Family Service barrel in our lobby any time before March 19.

Dr. Samuel S. Rockwern Passover Delivery of Jewish Family Service was adapted from a tradition that began hundreds of years ago to help those less fortunate observe Passover. Today, there is a great need in our own Cincinnati Jewish community.
