FROM THE RABBI ...
Sandford R. Kopnick

THE POWER OF ATONEMENT

It's not about saying you're sorry.
It is about being sorry.
It's not about asking for forgiveness.
It is about deserving forgiveness.
It's not about saying the words.
It's about doing what it takes.

We have all made mistakes. We have all been on the wrong side of someone else's mistake, too. Yom Kippur is the time when we Jews consider our year, and the times we've fallen short. And while some people realize that they've hurt others during this period of introspection, hopefully, the High Holy Days is not the first time we considered our relationships during the year. Rather, Yom Kippur is more personal; it is the time to consider the sins between ourselves and God. And for those who say, "Well I'd have to believe in God in order to sin against God—" not so fast!

The world that God created is filled with needs for its care. The understanding that each of us has about good and evil does not always have an "other" in the equation. Sometimes, we fall short of our own expectations. Sometimes, we don't measure up to our potential even though our shortcomings don't adversely affect others. I believe these missed opportunities and sins are a reflection of my relationship with God. Even if you don't, you shouldn't let yourself off the hook.

Yom Kippur is an important opportunity for introspection and improvement. Sometimes issues between humans cannot resolve, even though one party is ready to grow and move on. That is a time when Yom Kippur can help.

Sometimes, wasting resources, being less charitable than we should be, or passing up an opportunity to help another provides disappointment in ourselves. Yom Kippur can help with this, too.

Listening to the words in our beautiful new prayer books can inspire us to seek a deeper understanding of self. As we do, we can also seek God's presence in our resolve to do better in the coming year. Yom Kippur is not simply an opportunity for self-loathing. On the contrary, Yom Kippur is our chance to focus and improve. New Year's resolutions are fine, but Yom Kippur's resolve for acting better, kinder, more truthful, less wasteful, and more is better.

May we all find the space we need to seek deep understandings of ourselves, thereby finding a deeper understanding of the potential of Yom Kippur. See you at services!

L'shanah Tovah!

A TRIBUTE TO PAT LIEPPE PAST PRESIDENT

Pat Lieppe and her husband Charles (Chuck) were members of the Valley Temple for many years before retiring and eventually moving to southern Florida. Pat was the first woman President of our congregation and one of the first women Presidents of a Reform Congregation in the Reform movement and of a major Jewish institution in Cincinnati.

Pat was intelligent, strong-willed and tireless in her devotion to the Valley Temple. Those who knew Pat had the utmost respect for her. Pat will certainly be missed by the Jewish community at large.

We send our deepest condolences to Chuck, children Matt and Sara and the entire family.

May Pat's memory be for a blessing.

WHAT'S HAPPENING IN Religious School?

What You Have Taught Me

Over the last sixteen years as a Valley congregant, volunteer, religious school committee chair, Board member, Sisterhood president, and during the last nine years as director of education, I have had the privilege and the pleasure of getting to know and love so many of you. Rob and I brought Josh and Maddie here when they were very little. They were consecrated here, attended religious school, were introduced to summer camp, became bar and bat mitzvah, were madrichim, got involved in NFTY, traveled to Israel, attended Kulanu and were confirmed and graduated here. So many of our family's Jewish memories are connected to Valley. Valley has been not only our Jewish home, but our home away from home since our families live far away.

Much of my time at Valley has been focused on teaching and learning. As I leave, I want you to know, with gratitude, what you have taught me.

You have taught me that your children are beautiful and curious and need time and space to figure out who they are becoming. We, as their parents and teachers, have the privilege of guiding their journey, but also the task of sometimes stepping aside as they find their way.

You have taught me that you, as parents, care fiercely about your children and what they learn. You want to be partners in this learning, even if the content is unfamiliar. If invited and encouraged, you join in.

You have taught me that people rally around each other in times of joy and need. Time and again you have shown compassion and generosity to each other whether those in need are longtime congregants and friends or newcomers.

You have taught me the power of relationships, especially in a sacred space. If we approach each other with open minds, open hearts, and patience, and expect the best from each other, our relationships expand our capacities. We become capable of more than we thought we could do, say, or feel.

You have taught me to look beyond first impressions and conclusions. The reflective practice in which I have engaged with the teachers over time has uncovered assumptions and reworked longstanding narratives to reveal new truths about teaching, learning, and relationships.

You have taught me that we're all in this together. Our Jewish traditions emphasize the importance of not just a community, but of a holy community. With Rabbi Kopnick's leadership, we have learned how to celebrate and mourn together, how to talk and listen when we disagree, how to recognize each other's strengths and achievements and when to offer a hand if someone is feeling vulnerable.

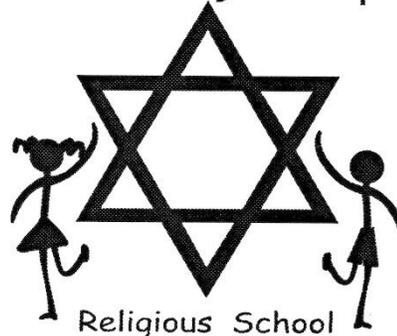

Thank you all for embracing me and my family when we first arrived in 2001. Thank you for becoming our classmates, colleagues, and friends. Thank you for helping us celebrate holidays and milestones and weather challenges and struggles. Thank you for sharing your children, your ideas, your talents, and your time. Thank you for your kindness, generosity and humor. Thank you for being our family and our community in Cincinnati.

May you all move from strength to strength knowing that you are part of my story and may we all find happiness and peace in the place God will show us.

Religious School Opening Day 2017

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Jon Hoffheimer

This is the month we celebrate the beginning of the world. Rosh Hashanah brings us a new year. We think about and connect with a new year - for review, for taking stock, for making amends. What actions are we proud of, what not so proud. What might we do differently?

We are told to be a light unto the nations. Individually we must do what we can. As I read Isaiah, the charge is to us as a group, not individuals. How do we approach this task. What is it that we can do as a group? This is where Valley comes in. I see at least two major ways:

1. Behavior, religious behavior. How we behave and how we are seen in our communities, can make an impression on others. The others being other Jewish persons and organizations and others, non-Jewish persons and organizations. Cincinnati is a small community and we never know what we say or do will be transmitted to others, or to which others.

2. Social Action. Valley has some Social Action programs. This coming year will be slated for some additional social action programs. It is easy to complain about what we do not like; not so easy to act affirmatively. Pick something and pitch in. If nothing is of interest, think about what might be for you and for other members and let us know.

When you add something new for your life, it means also taking something away because our lives are filled. So start small. But start. And start with Valley. Valley is small by intention. In many ways that can make organizing easier. We do not need large numbers to make a large impression. Help all of us make a difference.

PREPARING FOR THE HIGH HOLY DAYS SELICHOT

Saturday, September 16

8:00 p.m.—Adult Education

Featuring Cantor Janice Roger

Cantor Emerita, Indianapolis Hebrew Congregation

“Funny, It Doesn’t Sound Jewish”

Some of America’s most beloved songwriters and composers of the mid-20th Century were Jewish. Did the sound of the synagogue influence the music of Tin Pan Alley? Based on the work of composer, Jack Gottlieb, Cantor Janice Roger offers insights into sounds and songs that just might make the connection.

9:30 p.m.—Grand Dessert Buffet

10:00 p.m.—Service

Cantor Roger received a Bachelor of Music degree in Music History at the Chicago Musical College and did course work in Hebrew and Jewish Studies at the Spertus College of Judaica prior to attending Hebrew Union College. She came to Indianapolis Hebrew Congregation in 1979 after completing her cantorial studies at the School of Sacred Music and served IHC for 38 years until her retirement in June, 2017.

Join us for a wonderful evening of music and preparation for the Yamim Noraim — the Days of Awe.
