FROM THE RABBI... Sandford R. Kopnick

Coming Back from Isolation

In Genesis 2 we learn that it is not good to be alone. Our rabbinic tradition teaches us to “not separate yourself from the community.” Leviticus gets in on the act by saying “You all shall be holy (plural commandment to the entire group), for I, Adonai your God, am holy.”

Since 2020, we have been enduring a new isolation that was brought on by the fear of spreading illness in the community. Some were trapped for at least two years without seeing their loved ones. Without the internet or cell phones, some would have gone without even a video visit for at least two years. And now we see the aftermath as things are finally wide open. The hardest hit group seems to be children. Our sense of community has been challenged and redefined, and it is time to reflect:

We at Valley worked diligently to provide many on-line experiences since gathering together was not a great idea. And, for a while, it helped. However, those who are still relying on internet services and classes should consider whether that is still necessary—or just easier. We first offered streaming Shabbat Services in 2004. We were among the first. However, it was intended for those who were truly homebound. We were able to connect a 96 year old grandma who was too frail to travel to her grandson’s Bar Mitzvah. Some who moved away kept in touch through our live-stream, and that all made sense.

Today, a few still need to remain away from large groups, and for them, we continue to stream. Others enjoyed preparing Shabbat dinner with services playing on their phone or iPad. And while these new “rituals” became normal over the past few years, I am hoping that we can all agree that this is a less than ideal way to build community while celebrating Shabbat.

Children and adults need positive and routine interactions with other children and adults. Summer camps serve an even more important purpose now than ever. As I help train the staff at Goldman Union Camp, it is clear that there has been a delay in the campers and staff creating and sustaining in-person relationships.

Adults who have gotten used to being alone or isolated with a small pod of people may have forgotten how much they contribute to a conversation or how their physical presence with friends and acquaintances can provide a warmth and comfort that is lost on a computer screen or phone call. And it takes an effort to be in each other’s presence which many became accustomed to not making.

These summer months are a great time to reconnect. Come and meet our new Rabbinic Intern Matthew Berman (who grew up here at Valley). Come and learn with us at Torah study and worship with us at Services. Bring prospective members and long-time fellow Valley-ites with you to a program or a service, as we renew. And, if you find that you remember to turn on the service on your computer at 7:30, get in the car instead and be 15 minutes late. The oneg will still be there, and so will we.

It is time to embrace the ways we can be physically present. Our bodies and souls need the hug, need to see each other, and need to relate. We have a remarkable energy when we’re together. It’s an energy that helps the poor and needy, helps others mourn, celebrates joy, and reminds us that we are not alone. We Jews have survived so much over the last millennia; let’s not let the isolation of the pandemic define our community anymore. Let’s now move from pandemic’s isolation to the strength of community, and then from strength to strength again.

See you soon!

Sandford R. Kopnick

RABBI/EDUCATOR'S MESSAGE

Austin Zoot

As director of the Religious School, I am fortunate to get to work with the wonderful teachers who bring their talent and enthusiasm to the classroom every week. In my three years working at Valley, I've gotten to interact with people who have taught here for close to 20 years, and those who are just getting started teaching, having graduated themselves from the program.

The Valley Temple

It is inevitable that, at this time of year, I'm looking to hire one or two new teachers to our staff. Sometimes a teacher has gone through a transition, looking to focus more time on their growing family or step away from teaching when their own kids graduate. Other times, we have teachers who decide that getting a little extra sleep on Sundays is a well-earned right (the horror of such a thing...) But one way or another, I find myself doing a lot of thinking during the summer about what it is I'm looking for in an educator for our program.

Knowledge of the subject matter is always important, sure. After all, we are introducing a new generation of Jews to their peoplehood and identity, and I want to ensure that we have teachers who are knowledgeable and qualified. You might be surprised to hear, though, that there is one factor that I look for far more than pre-existing information. Because there is something I can't teach my educators, and it might be the most important detail of all.

What makes the best Religious School teachers is a contagious love for their own Jewish identity. After all, I'm willing to name the limits to what we're doing: there is no test at the end of religious school, no way to prove that students took in the information we were hoping they'd learn. I don't quantify our success by how much data has been downloaded onto the mental hard drive of a student, because if we do our jobs well, we will earn the right to continue learning with and engaging that student for many years to come. But when a teacher is able to show the kind of enthusiasm and commitment to Judaism that is the trademark of our program, I know that we are creating a generation of students who are going to learn first-hand what it is like to find value in their Jewish identity, and continually want to engage with us.

Having been to rabbinical school, I can safely say that I know a small fraction of what Judaism has to offer. There aren't enough days in a lifetime to read every word of the Talmud, to study every philosopher and theologian, to fully immerse in over 2000 years of our history. But what makes Judaism so magnificent is the way that we, as a community, come together to continually learn and play with Jewish tradition. And when I think about the people who create those learning opportunities in our school, I am so lucky to get to work with so many talented, thoughtful, and dedicated Jews, who are excited to share their love for our people with the students they teach.

If you would like to explore the possibility of teaching in our program, feel free to reach out and start a conversation. Because our school is done best when we all invest in making a warm, inclusive, refreshingly positive Jewish experience. And that starts with our teachers.

Thank you to all who make this possible. And thank you to all the parents who trust us with teaching your kids about how amazing it is to be a Jew.

We are grateful to the Jewish Federation of Cincinnati's S.E.E.D. Program, The Jewish Foundation of Cincinnati and an anonymous donor for their support in funding this position.

WELCOME MATTHEW BERMAN

Matthew Berman, a rising second year Rabbinic Student at HUC-JIR, will be our summer Rabbinic Intern. Matthew is the son of Lisa and John Berman, and grandson of Dolph and Nancy Berman. Matthew is a talented person who is a proud graduate of The Ohio State University. Matthew was a frequent leader at OSU Hillel services, and a devoted member of the Hillel community. After graduation from OSU, Matthew took a year to get to know Israel. While there, he applied and was accepted to Hebrew Union College, and stayed for his Year In Israel. Matthew will be doing some adult education in July, helping with services and B'nai Mitzvah tutoring, and covering the Torah study when Rabbis Kopnick and Zoot are at camp or away. You'll have a chance to meet Matthew at the Annual Meeting on June 2 and throughout June and July. We are proud to welcome our own back to Valley!

TIKKUN OLAM JUNE / JULY

with Protections for Health and Safety

This is the title of the amendment to the Ohio Constitution prepared by the Ohioans for Reproductive Freedom and Ohio Physicians for Reproductive Rights, adopted by a large coalition of supporters. The amendment is to Article 1, which states: "All men (italics added) are, by nature, free and independent, and have certain inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty, acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and seeking and obtaining happiness and safety."

This bill would add:

"Every individual has the right to make and carry out one's own reproductive decisions, including but not limited to decisions on contraception, fertility treatment, continuing one's own pregnancy, miscarriage care and abortion."

There are 4 other portions to this amendment, addressing such things as fetal viability, and evidence-based standards of care.

To be on the November ballot, we need a total of 413,000 valid signatures, from 44 counties, and bill would have to pass with over 50% majority. They must be collected by June 30.

We continue to work closely with RAC-OH and the Cincinnati Jewish community partners, including Rockdale, Wise, Adath, Temple Sholom, JCRC and Bend the Arc, Cincinnati.

THIS IS A VERY JEWISH ISSUE:

"The Torah, the Mishnah, the Talmud and later rabbinic sources consider the woman's physical and emotional health before that of the fetus. Until the baby is born, Judaism considers the fetus to be part of the woman's body. She is never the villain when difficult choices need to be made."

JUNE / JULY "BLUE BIN" TIKKUN OLAM DONATIONS BENEFIT

As many of you know, the Ronald McDonald House Charities of Greater Cincinnati has greatly expanded the number of families they serve. They can now accommodate 177 families each night, including parents, siblings and children receiving outpatient treatment. This has resulted in an increased need for donations from the community, so we've decided to collect these in our "Blue Bins" for June and July. These are the top five items on their wish list:

- Individually packaged snacks
- Travel-size toiletries (shampoo, body wash, deodorant, etc.)
- Cereal boxes and individual serving boxes
- 13-gallon trash bags
- Individual pump hand soaps

Their teens would also appreciate "Gaming Gift Cards". Gift cards for X-Box or Play Station can be purchased at Kroger or other stores.
